Distinguish Ladies and Gentlemen, we are here today to deliberate on the issues pertaining to our electoral process, governance and public sector management. Please permit me to emphasis that in a democratic society, elections are the major instrument for the recruitment of political leadership, the key to participate in a democracy and the way of giving consent to government. In order word, election is a process in the appointment of persons to manage the affairs of states and families or groups. It is a vital aspect of the global democratic practices. An election is a formal decision-making process by which the citizens choose an individual to hold public office. Nigeria as an entity has had her fair share of elections and electoral processes. A major determinant of democracy is the electoral process that provides the electorate the institutional framework for choosing representatives through a competitive free and fair election. Essentially, elections are the only acceptable institutionalized process enabling some or all of the recognized members of a democratic society to choose office holders. We have observed in the past that elections in Nigeria failed to promote the emergence of a democratic culture. Each set of elections seems to deepen the abuse of human rights, corruption and violence.

The emphasis on this paper for this conference is on the challenges of conducting free and fair elections in the forthcoming General elections in Nigeria. In the past, we observed that elections have been marred by unprecedented abuse of the electoral process in form of election rigging, ballot snatching, inadequate and late arrival of voting materials at polling centres, vote buying, connivance between the ruling party elites and Independent National Election Commission (INEC) to manipulate and even declare false elections results. Based on these observed abuses, we emphasize that representative democracy cannot be consolidated nor triumph where there is negation of democratic principles.

We examine election as a concept. It is a vital aspect of the global democratic process. The essence of this pre-occupation is not only to be armed with knowledge of elections but also to exude the lessons that can be learnt for the sake of the future.

Nigeria elects on the federal level, a head of state (the President of Nigeria) and a Legislature (the National Assembly). The president is elected by the people. The National Assembly has two chambers. The House of Representatives has 360 members, elected for a four year term in single-seat constituencies. The senate has 109 members, elected for a four year term. Each of the 36 states are divided into three senatorial districts, each of which is represented by one senator. The Federal Capital Territory is represented by one senator. The General election is an election held to choose among candidates nominated in a primary for federal, state or local office. The purpose of a General election is to make a final choice among the various candidates who have been nominated by parties.
The elections so far held in Nigeria can be categorized into five different phases:

3. Elections during the years of military rule.
4. Elections under the civilian regimes in-between the years of military rule.
5. Elections during civilian to civilian transition (1999 to date).

For history, the 2015 general elections was originally scheduled to hold on 14th February but was later postponed to 28th march. Current president of the APC emerged as the winner of the presidential elections and was sworn in on 29th may 2015, it was the first time in the history of Nigeria that an incumbent president was overthrown. There will be general elections in Nigeria in 2019, including the presidential election.

Notwithstanding, the features of election in Nigeria can be characterized as follows:

i. Elections in Nigeria have been particularly characterized by massive frauds, the intimidation of political opponents and controversy.
ii. Elections are devoid of continuity in the political organizations through which both violence and warfare have been noticed. Each period thus produced new political formation.
iii. Elections lack defined patterns to the way in which members of the class change their political allegiance.
iv. Elections have failed to promote the emergence of a democratic culture.

With each successive election, the ruling elites are not only more and more isolated from the people. They come to relate with them increasingly through violence, contempt, repression and authoritarianism. It is possible that the 2019 general elections would be one of the most intense events in our political history. For this reason, combating hate speech, fake news and other forms of reporting likely to inflame passion and trigger crisis will be of critical importance to the peaceful conduct of the elections.

Basically, there are conditions for the conduct of free and fair elections in Nigeria. These conditions are mentioned hereby;

i. There is the need for the establishment of an independent judiciary to interpret the electoral laws.
ii. An honest, competent, non-partisan electoral body to manage the elections.
iii. A developed system of political parties.
iv. A general acceptance of the political community of the rules of the game.

At this juncture, permit me to discuss the standards which might contribute to uniformity, reliability, consistency, accuracy and overall professionalism for smooth electoral process. These standards consist of the following:

i. Constitutional provision that provide the foundation for the key elements of electoral framework which include electoral rights and the basic principles of the electoral system.
ii. Electoral law that guide the conduct of elections including the powers of the electoral management bodies and government bodies.
iii. The legal framework that ensures that all eligible citizens are guaranteed the right to universal and equal suffrage as well as the right to contest elections without any discrimination.

iv. The electoral management bodies established and operate in a manner that ensures the independent and impartial administration of elections.

v. All political parties and candidates should be able to compete in elections on the basis of equitable treatment.

vi. All political parties and candidates should have access to the media owned or controlled by the state governments.

vii. All political parties and candidates are equitably treated by legal provisions governing campaign finances and expenditures.

viii. All voters are counted and tabulated according, equally, fairly and transparently.

ix. To enable transparency and to increase credibility, there should be provision for election observers to observe all stages of the election process.

x. Finally, there should be compliance with the enforcement of the electoral laws.

We submit that a political culture that is defined by violence makes development impossible because by its very nature such a political culture is destructive of the need and motivation for the achievement of nation-building. Hence, the media has an important role to play especially in the forthcoming generate elections.

Again permit me to share with you briefly the role of media in Nigeria electoral process. The critical role of media to democracy cannot be overemphasized. Some scholars hold the view that democracy is impossible without the media. This position is rooted in the recognition and understanding that the media monitors and strengthens the entire electoral processes from the registration of voters through the actual voting process and the announcement of electoral outcomes or results as well as the management of public opinions and perception of post election period.

Similarly, the media acts as an Ombudsman, a general overseer safeguarding the transparency of the electoral process, ensuring not only that information is available to voters, but also that the activities of stakeholders in the electoral and political processes are consistent with laid down rules and international best practice. The media has both a duty to ensure effective coverage of the electoral process, the obligation to protect voter's rights and accurate information, participation in debates and dialogues on the electoral process and engagement with stakeholders in the entire process. In performing these roles, the media should be professional, accurate in its reporting and impartial in its coverage. Without professionalism, the media could become an impediment to the democratic process.

In this age of digital technology where information is easily accessible with just a click of the button, any media organization whose reports are considered inaccurate and biased runs the risk of losing public confidence and good-will in the long-run. With exactly few months to the General elections, it is important for the media to begin to actively address critical information deficits in public discourse. Given the nature of political contest in Nigeria, inaccurate or biased reports could endanger peace leading to violence before, during or after elections. It is possible that the 2019 General Elections would be one of the most intense media focused events in Nigeria political history. Stakeholders are likely to rely heavily on broadcast media as well on the social media. For this reason, combating hate speech, fake news and other forms of reporting likely to inflame passion and trigger crisis will be of critical importance to the peaceful conduct of the General elections.

As we move closer to the 2019 General Elections, my appeal is that individual(s) should remain vigilant and constantly look out for those who seek to divide and incite Nigerians through fake narratives. It is our hope that we continue to count on the support of the media. Only by working together can we continue to deepen our democracy.

Once again, thank all of you for being part of this conference. The conference provide timely opportunity to examine past and emerging issues affecting the Nigerian electoral process, nation building strategies and sustainable public sector management.

Thank you!
About Us
The International Institute for Policy Review and Development Strategies (IIPRDS), Nigeria is a member of First Assured Brilliant Intl Limited, incorporated under the Companies & Allied Matters ACT of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. The Institute is a non-partisan organization, independent of government and other bodies. Since incorporated in 2013, IIPRDS has made significant contributions in quality research and international standard publications. IIPRDS has organized several international research conferences and published proceedings in International multi-disciplinary journals indexed and domiciled in reputable Universities. Special issues are published in the African Development Charter series; a strategic economic and policy blueprint for Africa development. We conduct our work with strict independence, objectivity, and non-partisanship. See website: http://www.internationalpolicybrief.org

Vision/Mission
To be the world's leading research and publishing Institute on policy review and development strategies. Through independent, collaborative and institutional research, review existing development policies especially in developing economies of the world, research into evidence-based strategies to advance new measures for achieving sustainable development.

Research Focus
In affiliation with national and regional governments, nongovernment organizations, the civil societies, research organizations and Universities, Africa's Development has been central in the Institute research programmes. Through clearly identified priority projects, IIPRDS works within the following focal areas,

1. Initiates research projects for Africa development
2. Organize research workshops, seminars, and conferences
3. Mobilize institutional supports for research implementation
4. Train researchers to enhance their capacity and technical base
5. Publish and index research findings in peer-reviewed Journals and readings
6. Provides professional technical and operational support for research in Africa
7. Establish interaction with beneficiaries of research findings for enhancing research relevance and adoption.

IIPRDS international professional and technical research team provides institutions and organizations with operational support for research in Africa.

Research Conferences/Journals
Research conferences are central to the activities of the Institute. The Conferences provides an opportunity for scholars to interact, share knowledge and strategies for advancing the course of development. IIPRDS adopt a multidisciplinary approach and work with an international network of partners to develop research themes which we actively seek to see applied in development policy and practice.

IIPRDS adopts a flexible approach to improve technical skills of local researchers, allow for regional determination of research priorities, strengthen national and international institutions concerned with economic policy research, and facilitate closer ties between researchers, institutions, and agencies who work within the purview of its research focus as well as policy makers. In doing this, IIPRDS supports networking and knowledge sharing between scientific, academic, and development communities among developed and developing countries. The conferences also provide an opportunity for training and capacity building for researchers.

Multi-disciplinary International Professional Editorial Peer Review Board.
The Institute has a seasoned and experienced Multi-disciplinary International Professional Editorial Peer Review Board. The board operates a blind peer-reviewed system. All submitted manuscripts are reviewed initially by the internal editorial process. Manuscripts are evaluated according to the following criteria: material is original and timely, writing is clear, study methods are appropriate, data are valid, conclusions are reasonable and supported by the data, information is important, and the topic has social and empirical relevance.

IIPRDS international journals are published and indexed in 3 directories;
1. Science Publishing Corporation (SPC) Germany
2. International Scientific Research Consortium (ISRC) United Kingdom and
3. International Journals of Advanced Scientific Research (IJASR), Nigeria, Nairobi, Ghana and Tanzania. IJASR are online international open access peer review scholarly journals. Click this links for published Journals: http://www.internationalpolicybrief.org/journals

Directorates of Policy & Research/International Schools
The Institute has Research and Policy Directorates. The Directorates are coordinated by the AFRICAN RESEARCH COUNCIL ON SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT (ARCSD), with project offices in University of Ibadan, Nigeria, University of Ghana Business School and Kenyatta University, Nairobi. The Institute is host to International School of Advanced Research Study (ISARS), The International School of Public Policy and Business (ISPPB) and International School of Energy Study.

Exchange of Idea Initiative (EII)
The Institute currently operates an Exchange of Idea Initiative (EII) with other International Research Organizations and Libraries to enhance wider researcher of its journals. With this initiative, Academic Journals are published in various Countries by reputable publishers and research organizations not minding where the conference is held. This dynamism has diversified and improved the quality of the Institute Journals, enhanced International acceptance by indexing research agencies, built confidence in conferees and enhanced their disciplinary relevance.

Timeline for Manuscript Corrections and Journal Publication

The timeline for manuscript assessment and publication is as outlined below:

1. The Plenary/Technical session is compulsory for all conference. You are advised to note the comments pointed out by the Chairman of the Technical Session and other members of the plenary group. This will help you effect corrections as expected.

2. Corrections of manuscript(s) (full papers) must be effected and submitted within 2 weeks after the conference. All submission must be made to: development@internationalpolicybrief.org

3. The Conference Professional Peer Review Editorial Panel (CPPREP) will meet 2 weeks after the league conference to review papers. This usually takes one week, after which the papers are forwarded to Google scholar International Standard Peer Review Research Council for professional and disciplinary blind peer review and plagiarism check. Usually this takes about 3 weeks.

4. Letter of Papers Acceptance and Journal Publication will be issued to author(s) on the 6th week after the conference. Acceptance will be in three forms:

   a. After peer review, papers with less than 50% accuracy level will be rejected. Author(s) will be required to re-write the paper based on observations.

   b. Secondly, papers with 51 – 80% accuracy level will be accepted for publication, but with minor corrections effected by the institute.

   c. Finally, papers with 81 – 95% accuracy level will be accepted for publication with minor corrections effected by the institute.

5. On acceptance of paper for publication, author(s) will be required to make payment for paper publication/pagination (hard print and online) and courier. Payment must be done within 2 weeks of notification of acceptance. Authors will receive their published journals within 10 weeks after the conference.

6. Accepted papers will be published in International Scientific Disciplinary Research Journals with high level Impact Factor (in hard print and e-version). Published journals will be indexed in Google scholar and other online research directory.
Guidelines for Manuscript Submission

Important Notice
Submitting your manuscript for assessment and publication in any of the International Journal Series means that your work has not been published elsewhere in any other journal, book or in a book chapter, be it printed online (except in the form of an abstract or an academic thesis). The editor(s) of the journal(s) have the right to edit or to alter all contribution, but authors of the submitted work will receive proof before the publication of their work.

Submission of Manuscripts
Manuscript should be submitted to the Editor in Chief, typed in English with Times New Roman font size 12, doubled space with 1” margin at all sides of A4 paper. Manuscripts should not exceed 14 pages. Articles for publication should be sent to the Editor, International Standard Research Publishing through the journal.

E-mail: development@internationalpolicybrief.org

Manuscript should be legibly written with clear symbols, drawings, photographs, chemical structures to ensure clarity and easy reproduction. Authors are urged to pay attentions to tables, figures and references which should be done in the correct format and appropriately cited in the main text.

Format of Paper
The paper should include: Title, author(s) name(s) (surname in full) and address (es), an abstract not exceeding 250 words, a few key words and the main paper. The main paper should have an Introduction, Materials and Methods, Results and Discussion, Tables and Figures, Plates, Conclusion, Acknowledgment, References. If the paper has more than one author, the first on the list is the Correspondence author.

References
The reference style should be APA format.

Review Process
Articles for publication will be peer reviewed by 2 or 3 reviewers to ensure accuracy. Guided by the reviewer’s comment on a paper, the decision of the Board is final.
Copyright
Upon acceptance of a paper by the journal, the author(s) have automatically transferred copyright of the paper to International Standard Research Publishing. The transfer will ensure widest possible dissemination of information.

Charges
Manuscript must be submitted along with a processing fee. Upon acceptance of a paper for publication, the corresponding author must submit the corrected paper and pay a publication fee of $200 (USD) only. Corresponding authors shall receive one copy of Journal and could also download articles from the Journal's website.

Publication Ethics and Publication Malpractice Statement
Publication decisions: The editor is responsible for deciding which of the articles submitted to the journal should be published. The editor may be guided by the policies of the journal's editorial board and constrained by such legal requirements as shall then be in force regarding libel, copyright infringement and plagiarism. The editor may confer with other editors or reviewers in making this decisions.

Confidentiality: The editor and any editorial staff must not disclose any information about a submitted manuscript to anyone than the corresponding author, reviewers, potential reviewers, other editorial advisers, and the publisher, as appropriate.

Democracy: The Electoral Process and Good Governance in Nigeria

Dr Ibrahim Adamu
Department of Public Administration, Ahmadu Bello University, Zaria, Nigeria

Abstract

Democracy is considered as a form of government in which the sovereign power resides in and is exercised by the whole body of free citizens directly or indirectly through a system of representation as distinguished from a monarchy, aristocracy or oligarchy.” Thus the central issue in democracy is the promotion of the interest of all the members of a politically organized community as opposed to advancing the interests of a few powerful minority groups. In Nigeria, however, democracy has come to mean oligarchy, decorated with beautiful flowers of democracy seen at a distance. All politically democratic structures are beautifully put in place but consciously or unconsciously, they are not allowed to function normally. Thus, the business of government keeps on circulating among a few political maneuvers who almost totally neglect the interest of the populace for their own selfish gain. Nigeria, as such, ends up with the ironical situation of being the 'Giant of Africa', very rich but the citizens are poor. The paper tries to identify and analyze the causes and consequences of abuse of democracy in the country through the electoral system and the impact on Good Governance. As a phenomenological, qualitative study, the research is much more concerned with how the electoral system is used to turn democracy into oligarchy and how political actions and inactions constitute a barrier to Good Governance and deter the realization of the dividends of democracy in the country. A combination of library research and survey were adopted. The data gathered were subjected to content analysis to establish causality among the relevant variables. It was established that Nigeria does not qualify for a true democracy since politics in the country is subjected to anomalies like vote rigging, money politics, manipulation and influence of the rich ones over the press etc. It is recommended that the government must embark upon massive political orientation campaign and to be part of school curriculum.

The Roles of an Office Manager in Minute Taking Techniques to an Organization

Sani Bala

Abstract

Taking minutes at a meeting has been around since the existence of government or official circle. Organizations transact business through communication both within and outside their area of operation. There is no doubt that such business transactions need to be coordinated for future references and for the smooth running of the organization. It is widely believed and agreed that organizations that keep minute of their meeting are more efficient and effective than those that do not. The purpose of taking minutes is to provide a transcription of what transpired; it is much like a court clerk, taking down transcripts of a given trial. Minutes of a meeting can be used as a reference document for those who attended the meeting and those who did not. Some of the objective of this research work is to determined essential things needed by an office manager before, during and after the meeting, to determine the best method of keeping records of happens in organization. The findings of this research work will be of significance to office managers, organizations, and the business and management students. It also help office manager to know the essential documents needed before, during and after the meeting. This will give them guidelines for writing minutes of the meeting. The findings of the study will also be significant to various organizations, they will state the benefits derived as result of minutes taking. Instead of having information transmitted by word of mouth, the study will make the executives appreciate the importance of assigning of an office manager to take minutes of meeting. The researchers recommended that only qualified office manager should be assigned to take minutes of meetings. This will enhance good minutes-taking that will be geared towards the achievement of organizational.

Girl-Child Education in Northern Nigeria: Challenges and Prospects

Abubakar Aminu Boyi
Department of Social Studies Education, Shehu Shagari College of Education, Sokoto

Abstract

The intensification of the girl-child education by the governments in northern Nigeria is something which is monumentally significant towards the socio-cultural, political and economic development of the country particularly in the global contemporary era of development. The paper critically identifies the socio-cultural and economic factors which are excruciatingly bedeviling the development of the girl-child education in northern Nigeria. Some of the factors comprised illiteracy, low community participation, gender stereotypes, hawking, poverty etc. and it also suggests a possible scenario that can be effectively deployed to rectify the challenges in order to create an enabling environment for the development of the girl-child education in northern part of the country. This can be done through the creation of awareness, encouraging the participation of community initiatives, fighting against gender stereotypes, the girl-child empowerment as well as the provision of social welfare services in the area of education, food security and other social funds which can boost development of the girl-child.

Abstract

ICTs as an Accelerator for sustainable development are an exciting challenge in projects and researches in both developed and developing countries can equally contribute and benefit. In a sustainable economic, human and material resources are limited. Studies carried out on the utilization of ICTs in electoral processes have been focused on the use of the digital gadgets on election conducted in developed nations like U.S.A, China, Britain, etc. and some underdeveloped countries like South-Africa, Botswana, Malaysia, etc. The present study has been focused on examining the challenges facing the use of ICT devices in election management in rural areas in Nigeria with a specific reference to the Northwestern part of the country. The methods of gathering the data were through oral interview and participants observations. Findings revealed that the use of ICTs in election management in the rural areas in Nigeria are faced with the problems of epileptic power supply, insufficient personnel to handle ICT facilities, malfunctioning of the ICT facilities in the rural areas, problem of vandalisation and snatching electoral materials by political thugs, etc. This paper concludes that Nigerian rural areas should be provided with electric power, qualified ICT personnel and reliable ICT facilities in order to improve the e-voting process in those areas.

A Dynamic Analysis of the Impact of Education on Income Inequality in Nigeria?

Abidemi C. Adegboye & Rogers A. Akisokeji

Department of Economics,
Adeyemi College of Education, Ondo

Abstract

Inequalities in income have been a raging issue in economics theory and practice especially among Less Developed Countries (LDCs) over the years. In Nigeria in particular, the dimensions of inequality have transcended geospatial, gender, and different income groups. Thus, a major goal of the national education policy is to make social investments on education in order to ensure adequate access of all citizens to education, and thereby bridge the income inequality gap. An important question that arises in this direction is whether differences in educational attainment and individual human capita development are responsible for this large income gaps experienced by many individuals in Nigeria. This study sets out to address this question by examining the effects of government educational spending as well as actual education output on wages and overall income inequalities in Nigeria. The study employs a dynamic framework to investigate the relationships, using the cointegration and error correction technique to perform the empirical analysis. Annual data covering the period 1981 to 2016 are used to conduct the empirical analysis. It is expected this analytical procedure will generate estimates that will show both short run and long run impacts of education on income inequalities in Nigeria. Indeed, with more spending on education, and increases in educational output, overall wages could rise thereby cutting inequalities in Nigeria. Policy issues such as the aspects of education that needs more focus in terms of spending, as well as understanding the aspects of educational spending that yields more on come results can be proffered from the study.

History of Political Parties and the Denial of 'Meritocracy' through Periodic Elections in Nigeria: Philosophizing on the Need to Rebrand Elections in Nigeria and the Global Image of Security Personnel under Successive Elections or Stand the Risk of a Political Revolution

Abstract

Political Parties are among some of the instruments and frameworks out of which leaders are elected or appointed into public offices through periodic elections. Hence, the importance of political parties and the sanctity of the police and other security personnel in any votive election cannot be over-emphasized. The current essay sets out to investigate a diversity of themes in Nigeria's electoral history, including those of: the history of political parties, the denial of 'meritocracy' through 'arranged elections' and the growing need to re-brand the poor images of the police and other security personnel under successive elections. The essay examines the history of political parties and the decaying image of Nigerian security through Nigeria's amalgamation, independence, first, second, third and fourth republic elections. And from deep philosophical reflections, the essay makes the thesis that the poor imaging of elections by Nigerian security and contemporary party politics in the country, are major denials of 'meritocracy' which will in no distant future cause political revolutions, unless such factors as: religion, ethnicity, non-ideological basis of political parties, and the numerical strength of Nigerian electorates, are identified and put under control

Abstract

In the global count-down to an expected credible 2019 general elections in Nigeria, the wind of defection in the country and the fitness of the INEC Chairman as a credible umpire, have been among key issues. Yet, little is said about the tendency among political parties and the country's electoral body, INEC, to always replace what Frederick Nietzsche calls Mecht (genuine political power) with what Nietzsche calls Kraft (acquisition of power through imposition and other forms of impunity). The current essay is both a contribution to the foregoing debate and a philosophical rejection of such a Nietzscherian imposition of candidates and electoral impunity in Nigeria. The essay begins by speculating over some of the crisis of imposition and impunity to be expected ahead of 2019 elections if the current INEC boss is not removed, before giving an overview of Nietzsche's teachings on this. And after due analysis, the essay predicts that unless the current INEC chairman is replaced with a neutral one, 2019 election is bound to be like any other previous elections in the country.

Abstract

Firm productivity has become a crucial component of competitive advantage in modern firms, prompting concerted efforts towards understanding the underlying factors that drives it. On the other hand, many business enterprises in Nigeria have been bedeviled with perennial challenge of stagnant or even declining productivity of labour in recent years. One basic issue that has been observed in this direction is the problem of proper training of employees and the attendant challenge of improving their contribution to total output in the firms. The effects of such challenges not only have effects on employee productivity, but also on organizational performance. In this study, impact of workers' training by firms on the firms' productivity is investigated for SMEs in Nigeria. That data used is based on the World Bank Enterprise Survey that was conducted for Nigerian SMEs in 2015. It is argued that firms that regularly train staff members would more generally adopt better production techniques, especially the use of technology which will aid labour productivity thereby reducing cost of operations and leading to higher performance. The Generalized Method of Moments (GMM) and Qualitative Response modeling techniques were used in the empirical analysis. It is shown that workers' training is crucial in stimulating productivity as well as ensuring long term performance stability among the sampled firms. The study therefore suggests that in-service training should be made available to eligible employees as a matter of right rather than of privilege. In the same vein, training of newly recruited staff should be made mandatory as a policy for enterprises in Nigeria. Focus should be given to induction and orientation courses which should be pursued vigorously in view of its relevance to newly recruited employees.

Abstract

The real estate sector investment has been one of the major sources of strength for the Nigerian economy in the last decade. This has been particularly true of the residential property sector: in most parts of the country, housing prices have been quite strong over the past few years. Looking more deeply at the composition of bank credit, the rapid growth of housing and real estate lending has been one of the driving forces behind the remarkable change in the composition of banks’ balance sheets in Nigeria. In regions like Lagos and Abuja, there has been massive expansion of the real estate sector and housing in the past two decades. Real estate markets world-wide have always been noted to be unstable in terms of prices. Thus, falling property prices tend to impose downward pressure on the banking sector, not only because of increases in bad debt expenses for real estate loans, but also because of a deterioration in the balance sheets of corporate borrowers that rely on real estate as collateral. Hence, questions about the movements of real estate prices and the extent to which they interact with the financial sector and the macro economy have come to the attention of monetary authorities and financial regulators. In this study, the major linkages and characteristics of real estate sector output, the financial sector management (especially money market) and economic growth in Nigeria is investigated. In particular, the study seeks to show how real estate output and its financing patterns affect financial sector performance as well as total economic growth in Nigeria. Annual data covering the period 1981 to 2016 is employed in the estimation analysis. All the data are obtained from the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) Statistical Bulletin for 2017. The study also employs the Vector Autoregressive Cointegration Mechanism (VECM) for the analysis of the relationships. The study reveals that the real estate sector investment has a strong effect on both financial sector and economic growth in Nigeria. The nexus comes as either the sector having direct impact on economic growth or having a significant long run indirect impact through the financial sector. The study therefore shows that financial sector is a major channel through which the real estate sector investment exerts impacts on the economy leading to recession over time. The implications of the strong link of the real estate sector with financial sector performance therefore calls for appropriate monetary and fiscal policy responses, especially in the long run.

Abstract

This study evaluates the impact of Entrepreneurship Training as a course of study and the intentions of students upon graduation. High rate of unemployment has occasioned an alteration in the economic plans of Nigerians. Following this, government introduced compulsory Entrepreneurship Development Training in tertiary institutions in the country to enable these institutions produce self-dependent graduates whom will rather become employers of labour than depend on government for employment. Unemployment rate has continued to soar, hence a call to investigate the efficacy of the Course of study on the intentions of the students upon graduation. Based on Ajzen's theory of Planned Behaviour, this survey study generated data using 150 copies questionnaire administered to selected students of University of Abuja using stratified sampling techniques and was subjected to chi-square test of significance. The study found that entrepreneurship training among students in the University does not have significant impact on the students' intentions. The study therefore recommends an overhaul of the training method for the Course.

Abstract

The paper talks about Gender Inequality in Education and Challenges of Sustainable Peace and National Development in Nigeria. It begins with an introduction and conceptual clarifications of the key issues - gender inequality, education, peace and sustainable national development. Various efforts have been made both by the Government and Non-governmental organizations in Nigeria towards promoting gender equality in Education which are part of the discussions in the paper. There are many challenges that are adversely affecting gender inequality in education which the paper also discusses. Some of the challenges include religion and culture, inability of the government to implement policies, the parental factor, low male and female enrolment in schools, and the economic value of girls. However, the paper comes out with conclusion and useful recommendations. It is suggested in the paper that the government should put up more efforts in enrolling both the male and female children in schools, proper and sound policies should be made to implement gender equality in education; the girl child education should be promoted by the parents. In addition to that, the idea of hawking and enslaving the girl child at home should be stopped and lastly, a public enlightenment programme should be organized by the government in order to make the people understand that the religion and culture are important in our societies and they all support the gender equality in education.

Abstract

In the crusade towards delivering world-class services, universities are relying increasingly on web-based solutions such as web-sites for information dissemination and web-based portal solutions for student university interactions to make their operations more cost-effective and timely, and to reach a wider audience. In Nigeria, several universities have adopted web-based solutions in the delivery of student related services and this paper examines the extent of use and the impact using the University of Maiduguri (Unimaid), Nigeria, as a case study. The data collected includes the identification of the various student related announcements/services on the Unimaid website over a 12-month period as well as identifying what students go to the Unimaid website to do and how the various stakeholders perceive the web-based solutions. Of particular interest is the identification of the use, if any, of web-based services such as e-payments and web-to-mobile phone services. From the analyses of data collected, conclusions are reached regarding the impact of the various web-based solutions on key student related services while recommendations are made for enhancement and future research.

The Impact of Structural Changes on Employment Growth in Nigeria

Abstract

Economic growth in modern times has the focus of spurring more productive employment that are highly accessible in every sphere of the economy. This is the growth that has more relevance in terms of income distribution and poverty reduction. In Nigeria, however, the high growth rates experienced between 2002 and 2014 did not lead to similar high employment levels. Indeed, the growth in the country over the period has been classified as “jobless growth”. During the period of the growth, unemployment was also on the increase. The question then is, how economic growth can be translated to employment growth. Structural theories have linked the poor growth-employment nexus to the inadequate structural changes that have occurred in most developing countries over the years. It has been observed that it is only economic growth that is accompanied by more structural changes in the economy can lead to strong employment generation over time. In this study, the effects of structural changes characterized through structural inter-linkages among the sectors, size of government, size of external participation, and employment shares in sectors are investigated. Their contribution to growth and other structural factors in the growth process was examined. Using data for the period 1980 to 2016, the study adopts the dynamic analytical framework. The Autoregressive Distributed Lags (ARDL) methodology is used for the empirical analysis. The empirical analysis showed that structural transformation that involved sectoral shares do not have significant impacts on employment economic growth in Nigeria. Rather, structural changes that involved increases in productivity and movement of labour to modern sector had more significant positive impacts on employment. Thus, labour productivity needs to be improved in the Nigeria. Structural changes should also involve productivity growth since this provides the foundation for reaping any positive outcomes of employment movement into any sector. Productivity growth can be achieved by diversifying capital accumulation away from the mining sector into other sectors, especially where more labour is found. The skills level of workers in the region need to also be improved through intensification of skills acquisition programmes and industrial attachments.

Abstract

Today, there is need to reposition the mental reasoning of Nigerian youths and economically empower them in order to certify the demands of the modern world. Enlightening the Nigerian youths is one of the actual tools to achieve this objective. Unless the awareness directs the power and energy of Nigerian youths towards academic and productive goals, the country keeps on experiencing social vices, moral and academic degradation. In order for the youths in Nigeria to be info-empowered, there has to be awareness of the use of ICT for empowerment, greater access to ICT tools, and an obstructed free flow of information. This research investigate the extent to which youths use ICTs for empowerment.

Abstract

Political parties in Nigeria display political activities such as campaign, distributing campaign materials, organizing and managing political rallies, working to register voters, circulating and nominating petitions, making campaign speeches and these activities may affect small businesses' growth in Nigeria. The study examines the nexus between political activities and small business growth in Nigeria. The research design adopted is descriptive research design. The study used experience and past books to drive the conceptual hypotheses in the study. The population of the study is 68 political parties as at 2018 and 1691 small businesses in Nigeria. The study found that political party's activities are associated with small businesses' growth in Nigeria. This implies that activities of political parties in Nigeria are determinant factor for small businesses' growth in Nigeria. The study also found that small businesses growth is also determinant factor for political party's activities in Nigeria. The study recommended that political activities such as campaign, distributing campaign materials, organizing and managing political rallies, working to register voters, circulating and nominating petitions and making campaign speeches should be carefully conducted and ammonized to favour small businesses growth in Nigeria. It is also recommended that small businesses should be careful in supporting the activities of political parties.

Abstract

The study examines the effect of political environment on entrepreneurship development using small businesses in Abuja, FCT. Over the years, government of Nigeria have used bureaucracy in administering their activities, fighting corruption and making employment law in order to ensure that the activities of small business in Nigeria improve. Yet, despite government involvement in monitoring and checkmating political environment for the development of entrepreneurs, the small business owners are not innovating and developing. The study employed survey research design and questionnaire were administered to owners of small business in Abuja. The population of this study is the owners of small business in Nigeria which is 650 and the sample size was reduced using Taro Yamane formula to 280. The study used descriptive statistics, charts, correlation analysis and regression with a statistical package for social sciences (SPSS, 23.00). The study found that political environment such as bureaucracy, corruption and employment law is significant to entrepreneurship development in Abuja. The study found that government of Nigeria should reduce the bureaucratic bottleneck, ensure corruption free economy where not only those in opposition party should be fought against. They should re-design employment to favour the timing youths and federal character system since it has a positive effect on entrepreneurs in Abuja.

Abstract

Actors in the international system have widely recognized the need to reform the United Nations and shape the organization into a new global power structure. This examines the key areas of reform, their effects on Africa and outlines possible ways forward. This study also reflects major criticisms addressed to the United Nations, especially the UNSC and discusses the various forms of reform, including the reform of the Security Council, suggested by various states. It is argued that such reforms should address the engagement and limits of the UN in the socio-economic matters of states. The paper is narrative and descriptive in nature, as it adopts a documentary method of data collection based on secondary sources. The methods of data analysis include context and textual analysis, and the research design qualitative. The Game and Realist Theories were employed for this study. Findings show that the current global order is unequally and partially structured. Hence, it is recommended that the UN and the UN Security Council should be restructured in order to create a platform for wider opinion and views of players and actors in the international system thereby establishing a just global system.

Abstract

The research work is on the delegation of responsibility on the staff of Maiduguri Flour Mills with a total population of 80 managerial staff. A questionnaire tagged delegation of duty and authority questionnaire (DDAQ) was used to elicit respondents from the sampled population. The study reveals that without delegation of responsibility no meaningful work will be achieved and productivity will not be high, thus it was recommended among others there should be free flow of delegation of responsibility to all staff for optimal production and sense of belonging.

Abstract

This paper examines the impact of effective leadership on organizational performance in Nigeria, a study of Nigeria Breweries PLC Sango Otta branch. Leadership is an important function of management which helps to maximize efficiency and to achieve organizational goals. In fact, leadership is an essential part and a crucial component of effective management within an organization. Effective leadership style plays pivotal role in organizational growth and performance at any point in time. The overall and effective improvement of organizations depend on the inputs of the leaders. The study further indicated that the need of an effective leadership roles at any interval impact positively on the stated objectives of any organization if needed resources are put in place. This work adopted the qualitative approach and on content analysis. Major findings show that effective leadership promote mutual collaborations between a leader and followers in the organization. The study also revealed that effective leadership is a unique ways and integrating employees with the organization to achieve its vision or objectives and that to a larger extent the effectiveness of a leader is largely dependent to the styles adopted by the managers which he says is central in the management of the organization. The study concludes that Leaders in Sango Otta brewery had greatly helped in influencing the organization's effectiveness by motivating and inspiring the workforce. Therefore, the paper recommends among others that there should be mutual collaboration between organization leaders and employees for efficient and effective service delivery. Those factors that will help to improve organization should always be identified and pursue with strong interest among employees and management. The study anchored on path-goal theory on its framework of analysis.

Abstract

This paper is interested in investigating the relationship between democratic elections and the need to introduce the proportional representation system in the Nigerian electoral process. The paper is motivated by the fact that there is a higher tendency of the people's decision of who represents them to be lost while relying on the simple majority system in Nigeria. This is because, the proportional representation system upholds that the number of seats won by a party or group of candidates is proportionate to the number of votes received and hence does not provide opportunity for vote void as obtained in other voting system especially the simple majority type that Nigeria practices. The paper is rooted in the theory of liberal democracy and its principles. The materials needed to actualize the aims of the study are largely accessed from the library hence, the analysis is qualitative. From the review of extant literature, the paper concludes that proportional representation in Nigeria is a way of reducing the wastage of votes that is associated with first past the post system (FPTPS), which we have been practicing in Nigeria. The FPTPS which has been in practice in Nigeria since independence is replete with several challenges as posited by several scholars. However, inspite of the shortcomings of this electoral model, several efforts have been directed at reforming the system to make it better, but these efforts at reform has not achieved the desired outcome because the system promotes violence and a winner takes all syndrome. The paper therefore recommends that the adoption of PR will promote less tension as it promotes inclusiveness and reduces wastage of votes cast in an election.

Community Policing and Public Sector Management in Nigeria: Relishing the Gains and Regretting the Pains

Abstract

As it relates to public service delivery, devolution of security via community policing is a manifest function of tackling a huge range of community problems. The evolution from customary policing to community policing has no bias for national boundary. It is a universal trend and the policing system in Nigeria cannot be an exception. Since the Nigeria police in 2004 embraced community policing as a hardnosed approach to police reforms, the stage was indeed set for a clear departure from primary policing, that was reactive and incident based, to a problem – solving oriented policing that is proactive with the community as the cornerstone of policing objectives. Arising from the above, this research intends to appraise this concept and practice of security devolution as a way of driving effective and efficient policing service in the country. The premise is based on the fact that democratic nations world over allows for the police and the policing mandate to be interested by their fellow citizens to protect and serve the public's fundamental rights to liberty, equality and justice under the law. Hence, to actualize that responsibility, the police must be a part of, not apart from, the communities they serve. In doing this, data will be sourced from both primary and secondary sources. The argument will be anchored on the decentralization principle of federalism as put forward by K. C. Wheare. It is hoped that the process of devolution of security via community policing will bring a paradigm shift that will focus on constructive engagement with people who are the end users of the police service and re – negotiate the contract between the people and the police thereby making the community co – producers of justice and a quality police service.

Abstract

Nigeria over time has experienced governmental instability in the form of policy formulation, prediction, forecasting and implementation. Basic infrastructure needed for economic growth and development are still lacking in the country since the entrapment of democratic governance in the fourth republic on May 29th 1999. The citizens are far disconnected from the government. Money politics and vote buying have polluted the good quality of democracy in the country. The destructive power of money politics has been pointed out as one of the factors militating against good governance in the country. This paper examines the effect of money politics, vote buying and election, and the implication on good governance. The paper further reviewed that the problem associated with bad governance as a product of corrupt electoral process. The paper recommended that in order to address the issues confronting money politics and vote buying, that there should be a need to address the challenges of economic poverty and social deprivation of the people in accessing the basis necessity of life which will give confident to the people in the entrenchment of good governance and capacity building for social justices and empowerment of the people to express their civic right. It was also recommended that family should inculcate in their wards the values of honesty and transparency and the importance of a single vote to the development and progress of the country, and that anti-corruption agencies should collaborate with banks and other financial institutions to monitor the movement of cash during elections. Lastly, democratically elected leaders should ensure good governance and improve the conditions of living of the ordinary people in the society.
